Marc Alexander hired as Director of Development for IHS

HONOLULU – Honolulu’s largest and oldest emergency homeless shelter, IHS, The Institute for Human Services, has hired Marc Alexander as the agency’s Director of Development. Alexander brings over 20 years of leadership experience to the agency, and most recently served the State of Hawaii as the Governor’s Coordinator on Homelessness, where he successfully worked with the City and County of Honolulu, State agencies, service providers (including IHS), and the business community.

Connie Mitchell, Executive Director for IHS, commented “We’re very excited to have Marc on board with us in this new role. He brings a wealth of knowledge about the non-profit sector and will be a real asset to IHS.”

Marc Alexander will serve as the lead of the development team at IHS, and will work to strengthen existing ties and form new ones with corporations, public and private entities, and individuals to support IHS’ in its efforts to end homelessness in Hawaii.

“IHS is a top-notch agency that follows best practices in helping both the homeless and those who are at-risk,” said Alexander. “I had the opportunity to work closely with them during my time with the State and was impressed with their outcome reporting and service delivery. I’m very happy to be joining their team.”
